Getting Started

These ideas will help you plan and present engaging and productive sessions:

- Effective use of PowerPoint. Use the slides to introduce key concepts only. They are provided to enhance your presentation, they are not the presentation. Avoid reading slides to the learners. Add your perspective. Learners appreciate examples and brief anecdotes that make the concepts come alive.
- Introductions. Introductions allow you to break the ice, create active instructor–participant dialogue, and set the tone for the class. They also provide indicators of the experience levels of your learners.
- Diversity of learner needs. Assume that some learners are just getting started while others are already business owners. Address the diverse needs of learner groups.
- Agenda. The agenda helps participants understand how the training will be conducted.
- Expectations. Discussing expectations gives participants the opportunity to tell you what they hope to learn from the training.
- Objectives. Establishing objectives helps participants place the information to be learned in the proper context and ensures that the content is consistent with their expectations.
- Participant Guide format and contents. The Participant Guide keeps participants on track with the presentation. Several worksheets help them apply key concepts to their own specific contexts.
- Pre-and Post-Tests. The Pre-Test provides a baseline measurement for evaluating the impact of this class. The Post-Test gauges how well participants learned the content. Both the pre- and the post-test are on one form at the end of the Participant Guide.
- Discussion points. Discussion points help participants reinforce learning.
- Parking lot flipchart/ chart paper. This option is helpful if participants ask questions that you do not have time to answer. Instead of answering right away, agree to answer at a later time. “Park” the questions on a flipchart or chart paper, and make arrangements to follow up with the participant(s) after the class.
- Breaks. No formal breaks are recommended. Encourage participants to take rest room breaks if they need them.

Training Overview

Icons Guide

- * Refer participants to the Participant Guide (PG) to locate information, descriptions, or relevant worksheets.

- * Engage the group in a conversation about the topic.

- * Assess participant comprehension or previous experience with the topic by asking them to complete a quick pre- and post-test.

- * Ask “high gain” questions to check comprehension, or present a problem such as “What would you do if this were your business?”

Purpose

This module—Is Owning a Business a Good Fit for You?—offers a highly interactive experience that encourages participants to make important decisions about their readiness to start a business. Starting a business can be an exhilarating and rewarding endeavor, but it is not for everyone. This class helps demystify what it means to be a business owner. It helps participants identify some strengths and weaknesses. Ideally, participants will gain a robust and nuanced understanding of their business readiness.

This Instructor Guide is the key document for this class. Please read it thoroughly. We provide plenty of white space for you to add notes and examples from your own experience. Please also review the related PowerPoint slides and Participant Guide in detail. These documents contain information or visuals you will reference during the class.

Preparing for Class

Each participant will require a Participant Guide, ideally printed two-sided. Participants do not need copies of the slides. Before printing the Participant Guides, consider adding local information to the For More Information section. In the space provided, list local resources that offer technical assistance or financing options to small businesses.

Objectives

After completing this class, participants will be able to:

- Clarify some of the myths and realities of small business ownership.
- Start a self-assessment to determine their readiness to become small business owners.
- Set a plan of action to complete their self-assessments by seeking feedback from stakeholders, such as family, friends, and potential customers.

Presentation Time

To ensure sure high engagement levels with your learners, allow at least 90 minutes to deliver this class. Use the suggested times to personalize the class based on the needs of your participants and the given time. Allow extra time for discussion and questions when teaching larger groups.

Materials and Equipment

You will need the following materials and equipment to present this class:

- Instructor Guide (for your use only).
- Participant Guide – ideally printed two-sided – for each participant. As noted above, you may add local resources to the For More Information section of the Participant Guide.
- PowerPoint slides (for your use only).
- Audiovisual equipment such as a computer, Microsoft Office PowerPoint, overhead projector, and microphone, if appropriate.
- Optional: flipchart easel, chart paper, markers.

Discussion Points

- Do your homework. There are a lot of myths about business ownership. Take the time to understand the realities.
- We all have strengths and weaknesses. The Roots of Power Self-Assessment is a tool for identifying competencies that require development. Leverage your strengths in order to strengthen weak competencies through education, partnering, asking for advice, and so on.
- It helps to have a practical action plan. (The Start–Stop–Continue Action Planner can help.)
- Ask a range of people for feedback. You gain great advice and build relationships with people who become stakeholders in your business. Do not forget to include a bank commercial loan officer on the list. It is best to start conversations with a loan officer before you ask for a loan.

The Class at a Glance

This 90-minute experience includes several group discussions designed to actively engage the learners. Pay careful attention to timing and pacing.

Optional Ideas

- * Consider inviting a panel of successful small business owners to provide stories about getting ready for business. Participants tend to value lessons learned from real-life success stories and from the mistakes their peers have made.
 - o Note: Time management can be a challenge. Most panelists need at least 15 minutes to share stories and respond to questions. If you invite panelists, you may need to adjust the schedule.
- * Another option is to invite panelists and participants to stay for an informal “meet and greet” after class.

Introducing Marlena

See page 4 in your Participant Guide.

- Marlena has the potential to be a successful business owner.
- She also has some concerns about business ownership.
- As we review Marlena's decision-making process, ask: is this role a good fit for Marlena... and for me?

Presentation Guidelines

Learning Objectives

Facilitation Note

- ✦ Briefly review the objectives listed on the slide. Relate the objectives to the motivations the participants shared.
- ✦ Point out that you will use the Marlena case to introduce concepts.
- ✦ Emphasize the importance of how these concepts apply to the unique situations of the learners.
- ✦ Clarify that the self-assessment learners will begin in class is comprehensive. They should complete it on their own.

Introducing Marlena

Please turn to page 4 in your Participant Guide. Let us meet Marlena, who has a lot of questions about if small business ownership is a good fit for her. As we learn about Marlena's ideas and concerns, you may discover if small business is a good fit for you as well.

Facilitation Note

- ✦ The case is theoretical. If participants ask questions about specifics, explain that the case is intended to introduce concepts.
- ✦ Ask one of the participants to read Marlena's story out loud, from page 4 in the Participant Guide.

From Participant Guide:

Marlena is worried. She is uncertain if her employer at a chain hair care salon will be able to stay in business for much longer. Her boss makes bad decisions, he has poor financial management, and he lacks a customer focus. As a seasoned stylist, Marlena knows she has the skills to provide high-quality services to customers. She thinks she has the necessary skills to open her own salon or day spa.

Over the years, thanks to her warm personality and professionalism, Marlena has developed relationships with dozens of loyal customers. Her family has been encouraging, too. They believe that her dream of opening a day spa that would provide exceptional services, a range of natural beauty products, and a relaxed, attractive atmosphere, could be a success if Marlena is willing to put in the necessary time and make smart decisions.

Marlena thinks she could be a great business woman. She also has some doubts and fears. She needs to understand what it really means to own a business to make a decision that is right for her.

Instructor Notes

Presentation Guidelines

Could you advise her about some of the realities of owning a business? Do you think owning a business is a good fit for her? As we discuss this case, you can discover if going into business is a good fit for you as well.

Facilitation Note

- * Thank the volunteer for reading the case.

Slide 6

Introductions: What Is YOUR Motivation?

Complete the worksheet on page 5 in your Participant Guide.

- Rate the list of motivations as High, Medium or Low for yourself.
- There are no wrong answers.
- Marlena's answers are provided as examples.

Introductions: What Is YOUR Motivation?

Marlena is motivated to open her own day spa. What are your motivations? Why are you here today?

Please turn to page 5 in your Participant Guide. Take a couple of minutes to complete the worksheet. Rate these ten motivations as High, Medium, or Low for you. We provide Marlena's answers as examples.

There are no wrong answers!

For some, money is key. Other motivations are to create jobs or because we are good at something like baking, fixing cars, or selling.

Note that if you already have a small business, try to remember your original motivations for starting it.

Please introduce yourselves by name and describe one of your top motivations you recorded on your worksheet.

Facilitation Notes

- * Allow approximately 4 minutes for individual work and 5–6 minutes for large group introductions. Manage time carefully. There will be more chances to share ideas.
- * Acknowledge and validate participants' answers. At this point in the class, focus on being welcoming and encouraging active participation.
- * Optional: Record the names of participants and their motivations on chart paper. Refer back to these motivations as you facilitate the rest of the class. Star () people who have already gone into business for themselves.*

- Existing business

Facilitation Notes

- * Do not spend a lot of time on these terms. Details are provided in the Participant Guide.
- * The list in the Participant Guide is not complete. If learners ask about S-Corps, C-Corps, and so on, arrange follow-up conversations after class.
- * Remind participants that the Money Smart Organization Types module explains these terms in more detail.

There are many ways to describe types of business ownership. Brief definitions are on page 6 of your Participant Guide.

Some terms overlap. You can have sole ownership of an online business, or share partnership of a high-growth start-up. A business owner can start a brick-and-mortar business such as a gift shop and add an online component later on.

Myths and Realities of Business Ownership

What Are Your Assumptions? True or False?

It is normal to make assumptions about business ownership. Some of us assume that working with an accountant is difficult because accountants tend to use words we do not understand. In fact, a good accountant --who makes the time to explain new terms--can be a great advisor.

When we take a few minutes to figure out if our assumptions are true, or based on myth, we move toward action. A check in about common assumptions can help.

Please turn to the worksheet on page 7 of the Participant Guide. Take a couple of minutes to provide true or false answers. Work quickly. Do not overanalyze too much. We will compare notes in a few minutes.

It is okay to answer "It depends" on some of these.

Facilitation Note

- * Display this optional slide while the participants complete their worksheets.
- * Allow very little time for the participants to complete their worksheets. It is okay to start the debrief discussion before everyone has finished.
- * Answers for the worksheet are provided in the next page of this guide.

Group Discussion Debrief

Here are the answers according to several small business coaches. Let us quickly review these as a group.

Facilitation Note

- ✳ Display this slide after the participants have completed their True-False worksheets.
- ✳ The point of this group discussion is to briefly review myths and realities of small business ownership. Avoid lengthy debates.

True or False	Answers	Presentation Notes
1. Starting a new business can be a huge personal sacrifice for your family.	True	Be honest with your family about the realities of this endeavor. You will be working long hours!
2. There are a lot of emotional ups and downs.	True	Business ownership is unpredictable. One day you sign a big client, and the next day equipment can break or a staff person can quit.
3. You have to "get it right" every time.	False	Successful business people make a lot of mistakes before they get it right. New situations come up that you cannot anticipate. The best you can do is to reduce or mitigate risks; keep growing and selling your business.
4. You do not need a big cash reserve to be successful.	It depends	It depends on start-up costs, how quickly you bring in sales, and so forth. It is a good idea to have at least six months of cash reserves on hand after you open your doors. You also need access to capital.
5. After about a year, you can relax and enjoy the profits.	False	Business owners rarely get to "relax" because they are constantly growing their businesses. You will need to pay off debt and reinvest profits to grow the business.
6. It is easy to get loans for a great idea.	False	It takes preparation, a business plan, and a good credit score. Develop a relationship with a loan officer well before you need to ask for a loan.
7. Successful entrepreneurs do it all themselves.	False	You need advisors and peers to guide and coach you every step of the way.
8. You will not have a boss.	False	Your customers are your bosses. They can be demanding. You need to comply with licensing boards and other legal regulations, which are also demanding.
9. You will have more freedom, control, and work-life balance.	False	You will be working or thinking about your business 24/7.
10. Starting a business is risky.	It depends	Although there is risk in starting a business, successful business owners tend to avoid risk. They will do everything they can to minimize risks.

The Roots of Power Overview

Slide 11

Roots of Power

SBA

Introduction to the Roots of Power Graphic and Metaphor

Please turn to page 8 in your Participant Guide.

Even a small tree has to develop a huge root system before it can bear fruit. This graphic depicts four roots of power that feed you and your business.

People Power

This refers to the ability to influence others: staff, partners, bankers, customers, and so on. People who rate themselves as High in People Power tend to be likable and easy going. It is easy for them to attract and keep customers. Marlena, our case study example, has a lot of People Power.

Sales Power

These roots refer to setting and attaining sales goals. People with Sales Power know how to sell, sell, sell, all the time. They have no problems asking for a sale. They are not shy about going to meetings to talk with new people. They are comfortable asking for business.

Financial Power

These roots refer to securing and managing money. People who rate themselves as High in Financial Power regularly balance their checkbooks. They use Excel, QuickBooks, or other financial management tools. If an accountant uses a term they do not know, they ask about it, look it up, and add the new term to their vocabularies. They know their personal credit scores and have strategies to improve them if need be.

Self-Discipline Power

These roots determine how you manage your time, habits, and energy. People who have strong self-discipline tend to work even when they have not had enough sleep. They do without luxuries to save enough to finance their business ideas. They pay their taxes on time. When a staff person quits or they lose a big account, they have a “Plan B.”

Slide 12

Marlena's Roots of People Power
See page 9 in your Participant Guide.

High:

- Easy-going and likable
- Active listener
- Honest
- Respectful of others
- Strong vision and belief

Low:

- Connecting and networking
- Management/supervision skills

Some people tell me I'm TOO nice!

Marlena's Self-Assessment

Please turn to page 9 in your Participant Guide.

Marlena rated herself as High on several People Power categories. She is easy-going and likable. She is a good listener. She is honest and respectful. She has a strong vision or belief in her idea. These are all great competencies.

Marlena also rates herself as Low as a connector or networker. She lacks management or supervision skills. She thinks she might be too nice at times.

The good news is that Marlena can use her strengths to support areas where she is low. Perhaps a partner can help with staff supervision or management responsibilities. Perhaps Marlena can find an advisor to mentor her on how to overcome some of her fears.

Roots of Power Self-Assessment Activity

Slide 13

What Are YOUR Roots of Power?

- People Power
- Sales Power
- Financial Power
- Self-Discipline Power

Finish the self-assessment at home.

You will not have time to complete the self-assessment in class. Make sure to complete it on your own. Ask stakeholders for feedback!

What are your roots of power? Start the self-assessment that starts on page 10 of your Participant Guide to see! We list 40 competencies that most successful small business owners tend to demonstrate. Like the Roots of Power graphic, the competencies are divided into People, Sales, Financial, and Self-Discipline powers.

You will not have time to complete the entire self-assessment in class. Try to complete the People and Sales categories now. You can finish up the other worksheets on your own.

Facilitation Note

- ✦ While individuals are working, move around the room and offer assistance. If they get stuck, encourage them to move on and leave some cells blank. They can complete the worksheet later with advice from colleagues, family, and friends.

Group Discussion Debrief Questions

- What did you learn from this self-assessment?
- What surprises you or interests you the most?
- For which competencies did you rate yourself as High?
- If you rated yourself as Low in some areas, what can you do to strengthen or develop other skills?

Instructor Notes

Presentation Guidelines

Facilitation Notes

- * Thank everyone who contributes.
- * Encourage people to focus on strengths, and how their strengths can be leveraged to offset or reduce weaker competencies.
- * Remind participants that the Money Smart series offers modules on Time Management, Financial Management, and Risk Management.

Slide 14

It Is Professional to Ask for Help

Ask for advice and feedback:

- Family and friends: How will they react if you work 60 hours per week?
- Potential customers: What do they want? What are they willing to pay?
- Other business owners: They can tell you what works (and what does not work).
- Bankers: Start a relationship with a banker before you need a loan.
- Potential partners: Look for partners who have skills and experience.

Slide 15

Start–Stop–Continue Action Planner

Start the worksheet on page 14 of your Participant Guide.

- Based on your self-assessment and our conversations, what do you need to...
 - Start doing?
 - Stop doing?
 - Continue to do?

Finish the worksheet at home.

It Is Professional to Ask for Help

Complete the rest of the Roots of Power Self-Assessment on your own time. If you find an area you need to strengthen, consider working in a partnership, taking classes, or finding advisors to help you.

As we said in the Myths and Realities segment, no business owner goes into business without making mistakes. The successful ones learn from mistakes and keep on working. They ask for help.

We encourage you to share your self-assessment with key stakeholders. Be open to their advice and feedback. You may find your stakeholders will credit you with more strengths than you assume!

Clarify and Transition

Are there any questions or comments about the Roots of Power before we move on?

Start–Stop–Continue Action Planner

Please turn to page 14 in your Participant Guide to locate the Start–Stop–Continue Action Planner. Complete this soon while your ideas are fresh.

Some of you might want to START asking for more input or advice from experts. You may want to START locating technical assistance agencies in the area.

You may want to STOP assuming you can do it alone. As we discussed, successful business owners delegate and collaborate all the time. You may want to STOP watching TV to make time to focus on business planning.

You may want to CONTINUE to learn more about small business ownership. We welcome you back for more Money Smart classes.

Key Points to Remember

- We all have strengths and weaknesses. The key is to recognize where you are strong, and where development is needed.
- Have a clear plan of action.
- Ask a range of knowledgeable people for advice (family, friends, accountants, other business owners).
- Include a bank loan officer and/or micro-lender on your list. Start these conversations before you ask for a loan.

Industry-Specific Self-Assessments

If you plan to go into one of these industries, assess your competencies in these areas.

If you are going into a business that is not listed, do more homework. Ask people who work in that sector to mentor you.

Key Points to Remember

Be honest with yourself about your motivations for going into business. Also be honest with yourself about your strengths and areas that need development.

Be open to learning all the time. Take courses, attend professional conferences, and keep reading about business ownership. There is a lot of great information out there. It is up to you to find it.

Ask for help! It is professional to ask for help and to listen to the experts. You have potential allies who can help: your commercial bank loan officer, accountants, and so on. It is up to you to find those allies and begin to develop relationships with them.

Conclusion

- Marlena is ready to move to the next stage of small business ownership—planning.
- She knows she cannot do it alone. She is open to a partnership with someone who has the skills she lacks.
- She needs to do more homework before she can make a well-informed decision.

Roots of Power

As discussed before, it is normal for a tree to put down a big root system before it can blossom. Growing a business, like growing a tree, takes time.

If you have patience and self-discipline, business ownership can be fruitful for you.

If some of your skills need time to develop, use other roots in your power base that are more established. For example, if you have Financial Power but lack Sales Power, create an arrangement with another business owner to share ideas. You can help your peer with financial management, and your peer can share sales tips with you.

Summary

Before we wrap up, do you have any questions or insights you would like to share?

Conclusion

Marlena thinks small business ownership is a good fit! She knows she cannot do this alone. She needs to do more homework and find the right partner who can supplement her skills.

What about you? Is business ownership a good fit for you? Take time to reflect. Show your self-assessment to trusted advisors. Engage them in conversations about your ideas, your strengths, and the competencies you need to develop. Good luck!
